Applying for the NCSP: Tips for Graduate Students

Congratulations on your interest in applying to become a Nationally Certified School Psychologist (NCSP)! NASP created the National School Psychology Certification System (NSPCS) for the purpose of credentialing school psychologists who meet a nationally recognized standard. Earning the NCSP is a great accomplishment and represents a valuable credential as a school psychologist. By pursuing and maintaining this certification, you demonstrate your commitment to the highest level of professionalism, ethics, and practice in school psychology. This document provides information for graduates from both NASP-approved and non-NASP approved programs that can be helpful in successfully navigating the application process and obtaining the NCSP credential.

NCSP: A Goal for All School Psychologists
Graduating from a NASP-approved training program streamlines the application process since coursework already meets NASP graduate preparation standards. However, many graduates of non-NASP-approved school psychology programs are able to meet the requirements of the NCSP and apply successfully for national certification. Documenting coursework and shaping fieldwork early in graduate preparation will eliminate potential hassles when eventually applying for the NCSP credential.

Requirements for All NCSP Applicants
It is very helpful to become familiar with NASP’s standards at the onset of your graduate education. These standards are critical to effective practice and represent best practices in school psychology.

The complete application with accompanying materials is available online. Review this document early in your education to ensure that your coursework and fieldwork meet the National School Psychology Certification Board requirements.

All applicants must:

- Complete 60 graduate semester hours, or 90 quarter hours, of study through an organized program of study that is officially titled “School Psychology.” At least 54 graduate semester hours, or 81 graduate quarter hours, must have been exclusive of credit received for the supervised internship experience.

- Complete a supervised practica, for academic credit or otherwise documented by the institution, that is distinct from and precedes an internship experience.
• Complete a 1,200-hour supervised internship in school psychology, of which at least 600 hours must be in a school setting (supervised by a credentialed school psychologist). This internship must be recognized through institutional documentation (i.e., it must appear on your transcript). Your internship must be a culminating activity for your program of studies. For information on NCSP internship requirements see the NASP fact sheet Selecting a School Psychology Internship: Tips for Graduate Students.

• Register for and pass the National School Psychology Examination administered by the Educational Testing Service (ETS/PRAXIS II #5402). NASP requires a passing score of 147 or higher for NCSP certification. Applicants who took the exam between 2008 and 2014 must have achieved a passing score of 165 or higher. Those who took the exam prior to its revision in September 2008 must have achieved a passing score of 660 or higher. All scores on previous versions are reportable for up to ten (10) years from the date the exam was taken. Be sure to list NASP as a score recipient at the time of registration. This will save you time and money when you apply for the NCSP.

• Review the following:
  • ETS registration
  • Study Companion

Application Process for Graduates of NASP-Approved Programs

• The application process is streamlined for graduates of NASP-approved graduate preparation programs, since these programs are structured to meet coursework and training standards required by the certification board.

• Have your official Praxis II score report sent directly to NASP from ETS.

• Print out and complete the application pages that are listed as necessary for all applicants.

• Obtain signatures from intern supervisors and faculty supervisors immediately upon completion of internship. These can be very difficult to collect later on and can be collected even if an applicant is not ready to send in a completed application.

• After graduation, obtain an official sealed copy of you graduate transcript; making sure it includes your internship and graduation date. Sealed transcripts also may be sent directly to the NASP office from your university.

• Send the complete application package, including transcript and application fee, to the NASP office. The address is listed in the application.

Application Process for Graduates of Non-NASP Approved Programs

While the application process is more involved, graduates of Non-NASP-approved graduate preparation programs regularly meet the requirements for national certification. Keep the requirements for NCSP in mind when planning your course of study.

Make sure that the courses you take meet the various subject area requirements. As you complete your coursework, save syllabi for the courses that you believe meet the NCSP requirements. Be sure the syllabi include the course titles and numbers. You will need to provide copies of these as documentation of completed coursework. You need to demonstrate evidence of knowledge and professional competency in each of the eleven domains. Your portfolio includes documentation of formal preparation and work products that demonstrate professional competency in school psychology.
The eleven domains of school psychology include:

1. Data-Based Decision Making and Accountability
2. Consultation and Collaboration
3. Effective Instruction & Development of Cognitive/Academic Skills
4. Socialization and Development of Life Skills
5. Student Diversity in Development and Learning
6. School and Systems Organization, Policy and Development and Climate
7. Prevention, Crisis Intervention and Mental Health
8. Home/School/Community Collaboration
9. Research and Program Evaluation
10. School Psychology Practice and Development
11. Information Technology

Prepare and submit a Case Study in Interventions/Problem Solving that demonstrates the ability to integrate knowledge and skills to deliver a comprehensive range of services that result in measurable positive changes related to the education and mental health needs of children. A case study rubric and directions are detailed in the certification application booklet and should be followed carefully. A case study is not needed from students who graduate from NASP-approved programs, as the programs themselves require a comparable project. In writing the case study you should address:

- Background and context of the problem
- Description and analysis of the problem
- Link(s) between problem analysis data and goals for intervention
- Specific description of the intervention and steps for implementation
- Collaboration efforts with family, school, and/or community-based individuals
- Outcome data and discussion of results of the intervention
- Compile an original and four copies and all documentation necessary for the NCSP application, including: application forms, course syllabi, and completed case study. Keep one copy for yourself and send the original and three copies to NASP. Your case study must not exceed ten pages.

Application Information

- The entire NCSP application process for graduates of non-approved programs is online. Specific step-by-step directions can be found within the application itself. A pdf version is also available to review content prior to submission.
- The certification board evaluates each individual application from graduates of non-NASP approved programs to ensure that all requirements are met. The professional standards staff at NASP generally evaluates applications from graduates of NASP-approved programs.
- Once you submit your application, the review process generally takes 6-8 weeks for graduates of NASP-approved programs and approximately three to four months for graduates of non-NASP-approved programs. Applications from non-NASP-approved programs are reviewed twice per year.
- Portfolios must be received by the due date (May 1 or November 1). Even if portfolios are submitted earlier than the due date, they will be held until the due date and then reviewed.
- If your application is found to be deficient, the certification department will notify you by mail. You will then have the option to resubmit, yet only need to provide documentation to support specific areas found deficient. Common reasons why an application would be determined deficient include:

- Failure to include syllabi for any courses that are not clearly defined by the transcript.
- Submitting syllabi that do not list the course title or number.
- Failure to provide work products that document professional competency in one or more of the domains.
- Submitting a case study that does not follow the problem-solving model
- Lack of internship documentation on graduate transcript.
- Incomplete case study or application forms.
- Missing signatures from professors or advisers.
- ETS Praxis scores not sent to NASP directly from ETS.

- Individuals whose applications are approved will receive their certification materials by mail.

Information for School Psychologists without Appropriate Internship Experience

If you graduated from a program that did not offer a 1,200-hour internship, or you have not completed an appropriate internship experience, you may be able to complete a field-based internship. Contact the NASP office for more information.

If you still have questions about the application process, review the NCSP Frequently Asked Questions and then, if needed, call the professional standards staff at (866) 331-NASP or (301) 657-0270, or e-mail cert@naspweb.org.
